

Morocco Unlocks African Film Potential

Prof. Fai Donatus Tangem's Experience

Morocco is a hub of opportunity for African cinema, says Cameroon's Director of Cinematography, Donatus Fai Tangem who is attending the Tangier National Film Festival. Praising Morocco's dynamic initiatives, Tangem seeks a co-production with the Moroccan Film Center to leverage its expertise and distribution, aiming to solve critical financing and market access issues for African film.

Paul Biya - Tchiroma Winner - Victor

STORY, RANDY JOE SA'AH

In the days ahead, Paul Biya, the world's oldest president at 92, will officially begin yet another seven-year mandate, cementing a reign that has now spanned an astonishing 42 years. He is the declared winner, but controversy continues to surround his victory with many across the country believing Tchiroma is the true winner. Civil society groups have widely condemned the election as a brazen electoral heist, plunging the nation into a fresh crisis of legitimacy. Tchiroma, whose dramatic resignation from government just weeks before the poll ignited a groundswell of support and saw him sweep key regions, now, finds himself not only deprived of official victory but also facing the interior minister's ominous threat of prosecution for allegedly triggering violent riots. Lives have been lost and hundreds arrested across the country. The economic fallout is immediate and devastating: Douala, the nation's economic heart, lies grounded for two days, while rioting youths paralyze Garoua, Tchiroma's northern stronghold.
